In the conditions of today's globalization, it is becoming an extremely urgent task to research the formation, development and implementation of the laws of youth activity in social life and socialization, to develop theoretically based recommendations and descriptions for its further improvement, taking into account new features. Today, in the period of reforms that have risen to a new level, it is an important issue to form important qualities of young people in society, such as loyalty to the Motherland, willingness, kindness, responsibility, tolerance, legal culture, innovative thinking, hard work and moral responsibility.

In his Address to the Oliy Majlis, the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Sh. Mirziyoev, emphasizes the need to increase the activity of young people in social life, civic responsibility and innovative initiative in order to effectively ensure the implementation of reforms in modern conditions: "In general, in the development of any society, the healthy and well-rounded growth of the young generation, which ensures its future, plays a crucial role. For this reason, we rely on our young people who are mature in every way, who have thoroughly mastered modern knowledge and skills, and who are determined and enterprising to further increase the scope and effectiveness of our reforms."¹ In modern conditions, increasing the social activity of young people in all-round development of society, turning citizens into direct participants of the reforms implemented by the state is an issue of urgent importance.

Improving the effectiveness of reforms in society, ensuring comprehensive and rapid development of the state and society, modernizing the country and liberating all spheres of life, supporting the innovative initiatives of young people and turning them into full participants in social processes serves to demonstrate the practical foundations of the principles of development. In this sense, "Increasing labor productivity, improving the quality and activating the human factor contributing to the creative initiative of a person is related to the correct, scientifically based implementation of these social, economic and spiritual tasks."²

That is why the social activities, educational thinking, spiritual views and innovative knowledge of young people are of great importance in determining the socio-economic development of the society in the effective implementation of the reforms carried out in the society. On the contrary, "If citizens do not actively participate in political life, existing socio-political processes will weaken. The fact that the conscious activity of the population has a defining essence in political processes requires the active participation of society members in the period of renewal and reforms taking place in the country."³

In recent years, in the process of reforms implemented in modern conditions, a number of works, studies and scientific articles have been created on the problems of increasing the social activity of young people, which, in turn, contain the theoretical foundations of identifying existing problems and finding solutions to a certain extent. Such scientists include N. Joraev, J. Yakhshilikov, S. Karimov, S. Otamurodov, I. Ergashev, Q. Nazarov, A. Kholbekov, S. Joraev, M. Kuronov, Q. Kuronboev, S. Choriev,

A.Jalilov, B.Ochilova, A.Saitkasimov⁴, O.Gaibullaev, F.Ravshanov, S.Mirzaev, etc., there are various scientific researches related to issues of increasing the responsibility of citizens in the society.

The laws related to the development of social, economic, political, legal and spiritual knowledge of young people in the society, their educational upbringing, and the development of their modern social knowledge and skills apply. The main goal of the research work is to prevent the irresponsibility of young people in the implementation of the mechanisms of ensuring the development of youth-related systems, to study the existing problems in this area and to give scientific conclusions on their solution.

A.Saitkasimov stated that "It is important to analyze the participation of citizens in political processes, their socio-political activity from today's point of view, to make relevant conclusions that it has a unique place in the political processes of society and that it fulfills one of the main tasks of maintaining a stable environment in the country" is considered. This, in turn, is a process related to the formation and development of a healthy environment in society, a healthy lifestyle, peace and tranquility of our people, active labor relations and creative potential.⁵

Based on these, it is appropriate to carry out the following important tasks in improving the social activity of young people in an innovative way:

1. To study the nature, content and development characteristics of the social activity of young people in the society;
2. Analysis of the connection of youth activity with renewal and modernization of the social life of the society;
3. Researching the socio-philosophical aspects of the reflection of youth activity in social life;
4. Scientific analysis of the role of national customs and traditions in the formation of youth activity;
5. Elucidating the problems related to the formation of innovative thinking of youth social activity in various spheres of society.

Also, of course, replacing destructive views in the minds of young people with constructive ideas is one of the main criteria for ensuring social stability in society.

The processes of ensuring the social stability of society are related to specific philosophical laws and this process covers the theoretical and practical aspects of the problems of innovative formation of youth activity in various spheres of society.

The processes of moral and spiritual instability in the life of young people, which may arise in society, play a negative role in the development of social life, therefore, it is necessary to improve important measures to ensure the moral security of young people.

Ensuring the moral security of young people increases their social and moral responsibility in the sustainable development of society, as a result of which important principles of development are created. D.Ernazarov said, "It should be emphasized that the concept of national security includes ensuring the level of stability in all political, social, cultural, spiritual and other spheres that ensure the development of the vital activities of the state, that is, the absence of external and internal negative influences in their development. And the civil society should understand such dangers in time and define a strategy to fight against them".⁶

It is possible to prevent the evils of moral instability that may arise in society by using new social and educational propaganda technologies to increase the social activity of young people.

To develop the thinking of young people, to determine the directions of establishing the practice of connecting theoretical views with the life of society, to make philosophical observations and to enrich the theoretical and methodological bases of research in this direction, to use them in practical processes in cooperation with civil society institutions, and to create suitable conditions for the learning of young people, provides appropriate scientific proposals and recommendations for the practical implementation of measures.

The specific responsibilities, duties and actions of citizens, self-governing bodies, state, public, non-governmental and non-profit organizations in our country are important for the participation of young people in socio-political processes, their legal and spiritual activity. This, in turn, is a process related to the formation and development of a healthy environment in society, a healthy lifestyle, peace and tranquility of our people, active labor relations and creative potential.

One of the important features of the formation of social activity is the high responsibility of young people. The youth's activity in solving socially important issues in the society results from their thinking, innovative knowledge, spiritual views, moral style, understanding of national interests. B.Mamatyusupov said, "Under social activism, it is necessary to understand behavioral methods and actions related to the acceptance, reconstruction or reinterpretation of a task of social importance. As a result, the essence of solving social problems is understood, the process of connecting the individual with his "I" takes place, the internal motivation that expresses the point of view of the subject prevails. As a result, a person assumes certain obligations, becomes a subject of responsibility and achieves important results. As soon as the "ascension" from the social individual to the individual begins to take place, the social significance of initiative actions and results increases" ⁷.

Features of increasing the innovative activity of young people in ensuring the social stability of the society are as follows:

- social and political activity, moral and legal responsibility of young people are factors related to social life;

- the role and importance of socio-political institutions in increasing the social activity of young people;

- the role of youth social activity is important in ensuring social stability of society, implementing modernization processes;

- it is an important process to research the theoretical and practical aspects of the problems of youth responsibility formation in various spheres of society and to conduct sociological research in this regard.
