The contradictory changes taking place on earth today are a period of complex tests for every nation, every people, and even every state. During such trials, the most important thing is to stay on the path of independent development that you have chosen. In this regard, it can be said that our country has recently adopted a new version of the Defense Doctrine. Its main goal is to further increase the fighting power of our national army and ensure the peace of our people. The doctrine also prioritizes the principle of openness of Uzbekistan's foreign policy, further development of friendly and practical relations with close neighbors, further strengthening of state independence and sovereignty.

Given the specifics of the geostrategic location of the country, as well as the emerging military-political situation in the region, the tasks and structures of the Armed Forces have been revised. The State Committee for Defense Industry was established. Based on the systemic changes in the field of military training, the activities of the Armed Forces Academy have been radically reorganized. The work on equipping the troops of the Ministry of Defense with modern types of weapons, military equipment and communications has reached a new level.

President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Supreme Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces Shavkat Mirziyoyev said during a fight with servicemen in the military unit of the South-West Special Military District, "Our servicemen must be physically strong, spiritually advanced. You must serve our great ancestors, such as Amir Temur and Jaloliddin Manguberdi, so that our youth can follow your example in the sense of patriotism and devotion to the motherland." [1]

In this regard, the military personnel, who focus their activities on the protection of the Motherland and human life, have a greater responsibility. In particular, all officers who train young soldiers as military specialists must be distinguished by a number of qualities, such as deep thinking, perseverance in decision-making, culture of communication, eloquence, knowledge of the secrets of public speaking, public speaking. Human society has emerged that different ways of using words and speech, of conveying and accepting ideas within its capabilities, have been formed. Oratory is such an art. This art, also known as rhetoric or oratory, has always served the ideology of the time.

In the modern world, when the struggle for the hearts and minds of the people is going on, currents expressing their interests in various ways are emerging. Therefore, it is necessary to be able to respond to them with deep knowledge and enlightenment, to master the art of reasoning through public speaking skills. It is no coincidence that the first President of the Republic of Uzbekistan's book "High spirituality is an invincible force" emphasizes that "ideological landfills have greater power than nuclear landfills." Public speaking skills are primarily a field of knowledge aimed at developing a speaker's abilities and talents. This art has always sharpened the mind of the individual and plays an important role in the life of society as he develops his speaking skills.

Speech culture and oratory as a subject of training in all higher educational institutions of the republic, including the Armed Forces Academy, according to the training programs of operative-tactical steam officers "The art of oratory of a military leader. The culture of speech and communication on work (service) "are taught. Each person's speech will have individual, distinctive features; however, the basic language elements - the vocabulary structure and grammatical structure - are not only specific to individuals, but also general, that is, they apply to a particular language community as a whole. Speech is closely related to a person's thinking, his consciousness. In speech, one's thoughts are formed and present.

Because of speech and the generalization of being based on speech, abstract reflection becomes possible, logical conceptual thinking that transcends individuality and becomes a product of society. Speech is also of great importance in the development of the human mind, in the manifestation and action of other aspects of the human psyche, his senses, perception, memory, thoughts, feelings, will, and so on. The art of public speaking has a special significance in the path of social progress that mankind has traversed. Its roots go back a long way. Although the doctrine of the culture of speech was formed in ancient Rome and Athens, it is known from the experience of the art of oratory that before that it appeared in countries such as Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, and India. During this period, the development of society, the rapid development of trade, the judiciary raised the level of public speaking to the level of art.

The art of public speaking is equally glorious as the art of command. History has repeatedly shown that the famous orator Cicero's wisdom: "In history, you have to be either a good military commander or a good orator" is not in vain. The origin of oratory, i.e. the art of beautiful and beautiful speech, is directly related to ancient Greece. The art of public speaking, like poetry and prose, is a creative field, and has even been recognized as the "king of the arts". The art of public speaking has had a profound effect on public affairs, on the minds and emotions of the people.

The ancient Greeks regarded beautiful speech as an art and correctly demonstrated its essence. In the 5th century BC, a culture of monologue (solo) speech was formed in Greece. During this period, the speaker is divided into three tasks, which are: to explain something, to encourage a certain thinking, conclusion, especially action, and to create a certain satisfaction in the audience.

One of the main tasks of the speaker is to arouse certain thoughts and feelings (justice, patriotism) in the audience. Well-known political scientist Nazrulla Juraev rightly wrote in his book "If you are aware ..." Civilization, including sophistication in Greece, religion in India, material and technological progress in Europe, and morality in Turan. In our country, morality has always been revered as an incomparable concept. Such qualities as the ability to speak meaningfully and politely, the ability to distinguish between positive and negative words in speech, the ability to distinguish the back and the right place of speech, and the etiquette of speech are among the pillars of the spirituality of human morality in Turan.

Speech spoken in accordance with the laws of the sciences listed above can be elevated to the level of art. The art of public speaking requires specific skills, mastery of oral forms of speech. It takes a lot of work to make a beautiful, moving speech. R. from the Western sages. As Emerson puts it, "Speech is a powerful force: it convinces, motivates, compels." This view emphasizes the quality of speech in such a way that it is, first and foremost, the art of persuasion. The speech of each facilitator communicating with students should be convincing, effective, substantiated, and well-grounded [3]. We mentioned above that the ancient art of oratory was equated with the art of military command. This is not in vain, of course. Because states and borders that cannot be conquered by an army can be subdued by the art of speech.

So the world is ruled by the word, but at the heart of the word lies thought-based labor. You say that no one wants to speak meaningfully, to enjoy a conversation with a smart interlocutor, to express their opinion clearly. A politician who works in the affairs of government infuses his citizens with ideas through words. A journalist who wants to capture people's hearts and minds first looks for a set of words. Even diplomats, lawyers, teachers and religious figures are preoccupied with this task. Almost every profession cannot exist without speech activity.

The word will be kind, evil, discriminating, and healing. LN Tolstoy said to look for a word that would unite people. It is known from history that such a word is used by many of our scientists. Right thinking, right speech is recognized as a sign of culture. Being able to write without mistakes means "spelling means literacy. Literacy is a sign of culture. " The word is created, the word is corrupted, the word that builds is the word that destroys, the word that destroys is the word that destroys, the word that destroys is the word that destroys, the word that destroys is the word that destroys. Therefore, the attitude to it should be at the level of responsibility accordingly.

There will be no one who does not understand the power, essence, character, and generosity of the word, but there may be those who cannot express it. Such considerations place responsibility, vigilance, vigilance, and vigilance, first and foremost, on military educators in the field of education and training, as well as on all officers working with personnel.
